Addressing the Crisis of Toxic Traces in Food Products

IMPACT

The public emotional response centers around three key themes:

- Health anxiety about contamination effects amongst the public
- Feelings of betrayal over safety standard failures
- Calls for greater corporate accountability

FINANCIAL IMPACT

The Financial impact of this would initially be negative on the company as there will be increased spending on the action plan but in the long run opting for better practices will improve public perception hence increasing sales.

The combined resources provided by the merger will help us sail smoothly through these difficulties.

ACTION PLAN

- After thorough inspection across the supply chain , we find the source where the contamination lies and replace that vendor with a more reliable source.
- Increase testing and safety protocols
- Discard existing stock as it is contaminated
- Increase advertising of these safety protocols of the “safer” food being provided by us.
- For the time being increase our marketing costs, aiming to reach most of the public in order to regain their trust.

LONG TERM GOALS

1. Tech related changes:

Use technology for real-time monitoring of food safety in storage and preparation. Implement traceability systems to track ingredients across the supply chain.

2. Audit and Certification:

Obtain certifications from recognized food safety bodies (e.g., FSSAI, ISO 22000). Regularly publish audit results to demonstrate transparency.

SHORT TERM GOALS

1. Public Apology and Transparency:

- Issue a heartfelt apology across all platforms, taking full responsibility for the issue.
- Communicate the steps being taken to investigate and resolve the problem transparently.

2. Recall and Inspection:

- Initiate an immediate recall of all potentially contaminated products.
- Conduct rigorous testing of raw materials and final products to identify and eliminate the source of contamination.

3. Crisis Management Task Force:

- Form a cross-functional task force comprising quality control, PR, and legal experts to handle the crisis effectively.
- Engage with regulatory authorities to demonstrate compliance and build trust.
